MANY FORESEE PUBLIC UTILITIES AS PRESIDENT'S NEXT PROBLEM Investment Houses Believe He Will Consider

Refinancing, but Government Needs Are Paramount--Gossip of the Street

· MANY investment houses are of the opinion that the next big problem which President Wilson will tackle will be some action looking toward the refinancing of public utilities.

It thust be acknowledged, however, that those who have volunteered such an opinion are more or less interested in public utility corporations. They seem justified in claiming that many of these utilities are simply extensions or auxiliaries to the railroads.

A number of these concerns need money for much-needed extenns and improvements, and many of them have large issues, both of bonds and short-term notes, coming due during the present year with as little prospect of successful new financing as had the railroads.

Reports from a majority of these companies, especially those supplying power, light, heat and transportation, show ever-increasing demands on their present insufficient plants. A large number of these demands comes from concerns engaged in the manufacture of munitions or other war material which comes under the classification of essentials. It is believed that the possibility of another Liberty Loan not later than March precludes any possibility of extensive new financing by these concerns, and that the only remedy for the situation is Government assistance where it can be shown that the continued operation of the concern is absolutely necessary to the successful prosecution of the war.

Solution of Railroad Problem a Master Stroke

There were two men who could not be found in the financial districts Philadelphia on Monday. One was the man who believed that the Government would lose money through the guarantee to the railroads of net earnings on the basis of a three-year average, and the other was the man who believed that this guarantee is going to strike a "snag" in

The railroad situation, which has acted as a wet blanket over the whole security market for so many months, with threats of receiverships, has been solved, and every financial concern and institution in the country enters on the new year with a song, where recently the prevailing note was despair.

During the year 1917 the difficulties of the roads had been piling up in every conceivable form. Demands for increased wages, physical deterioration, increasing cost of material, shortage of labor, and last, but by no means least, the utter impossibility of new financing with an everincreasing mountain of maturities piling up which could only be partly relieved by short-term' securities offered at ruinous rates.

Government intervention came at the opportune moment. Every railroad official, every official of every bank and trust company that had loaned liberally on railroad securities as collateral, every banking and investment house that dealt in railroad securities (and there are few who did not), and every investor who owned such securities, must have felt as though relieved of a heavy burden when at one stroke the President issued his proclamation taking over the railroads and guaranteeing their net carnings on a liberal basis by the Government. Every industry in the country must benefit from this action, for transportation is the life blood of all of our industries. With the elimination of useless and expensive parallel passenger service which has never been other than an expense, as well as an interference with the rapid movement of freight, which was sidetracked to make way for de luxe travel, freight will regain its proper place in railroad management. There will be more co-ordination and consolidation of traffic, terminal facilities will be extended, ports which have heretofore been the victims of an unjust railroad discrimination will be used to the limit, and congestion avoided. There are few financiers in this city today who ever expect to see the railroads return to status quo, no matter what the issue of the war. There are many who consider the action of the President in this connection as a master stroke, ranking only in prime importance with the Federal Reserve act. It is no figure of speech to say that, by his action the President has made the railroads safe for the investor, for next to Government bonds there is no safer investment in the country today than these railroad ### bonds and other railroad securities.

Conjecture on Next Liberty Loan Interest There is a difference of opinion as to the rate of interest which the next Liberty Loan will carry. Some financiers maintain that it will not exceed 4 per cent, and in support of their contention they quote the speech of Secretary McAdqo when addressing the Union League in this city recently. Others maintain that in order to float the next loan successfully it must carry 41/2 per cent interest, and in support of their contention they say that the country banks are carrying more than $2,000 .-900,000 of the last loan and are seeking relief from the Federal Reserve banks. There is no way of substantiating this assertion at present,

and the facts may or may not be exaggerated

World War Has Corrected False Views If this world-war has demonstrated anything more than another it is our underestimation of the pliability of financial and economic factors. Statistics upon which we relied to base our conclusions led us to conslude that Germany, which was always dependent on other nations for large supplies of food, must naturally have been exhausted long since and that the food cargoes destined for Great Britain and sunk by submarines would have reduced that country to starvation long ago, Germany still holds out, although the best authorities place her limit at the end of 1918, while the same authorities claim that Great Britain is yet to attain during the present year her greatest man-power, and that from an economic standpoint she can hold out almost in-

As for the United States, there seems to be no divided opinion. The virtually unlimited producing capacity of this country is considered the strongest element in its unique economic position among the nations at war. Everything necessary to sustain our own lives as well as those of our allies can be produced here in abundance. Our financial strength, based upon an accumulation of gold never equaled in the history of any other nation, coupled with the elastic currency and credit system of the Federal Reserve banks, gives us the supreme control of the world's finances both now and for a long time in the future and has transformed us from a debter nation in 1912 to a credit nation in 1916. The supreme business of this country is to win the war in 1918 and the greatest drawback to that attainment will be over-confidence in our

Optimistic Sentiment Rules Bond Market There is a distinct note of optimism in the bond houses when speak ing of the prospects for the coming year. A large number of the large concerns are in the market for high-grade bond salesmen to fill the ranks which were sadly depleted by their best men volunteering for service, This is in sharp contrast with the conditions in the bond business for the year just closed, which is universally acknowledged as the year that will go down in history as the worst bond year ever recorded. A well-known house that makes a specialty of railroad securities has compiled a statistical chart which shows that the average price of ten first-class railroad bonds which are legal investments for savings banks, declined from 89 at the beginning of 1917 to 77 in the latter part of the year, and the average price of the bonds of ten second-class oads dropped from 95 to 821/2 in the same period.

But the year starts out with every indication of being an unusually osperous one for the investment houses. There is a different feeling in he air. Every one is optimistic. Investment bankers have taken courage as a result of the action of the Government. They are already complaining of smaller supplies than at any time, especially at the close of the year, and it is generally believed that a number of new issues ### will shortly appear at attractive figures for investors.

Advantages of Rediscount System Superintendent Skinner, of the New York State Banking Departent, in his annual report just submitted to the Legislature of that State, calls special attention of untra-conservative bankers to the advantages of the rediscount features of the Federal Reserve banks as follows: "Our past experience has fully demonstrated that the currency of the country should be so elastic and adjusted to current needs, and the old notion that a rediscount by a financial institution is necessarily a sign of weakness, is inconsistent with the theory upon which the present currency of the country is based. The combination of gold and of commer cial paper as a basis for our currency is believed to render it both safe adjustable, and the experience of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in connection with the placing of these loans would seem to dem-

distrate its elasticity. /
"If currency be considered simply as an instrument, a means of facilitating business. It is evident that an adequate supply of it is necessary to carry on the business and commerce of the country when such demands age being made upon the financial system to meet the of the national Government. Unless advantage is taken of the re-int privilege, contraction and a denial of credit to persons engaged

Congressman Tinkham Tells of Firing at Foe in Italy

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Jan. 2.—Con-gressman George Holden Tinkham, of Massachusetts, who is said to have fired tion of a colonel commanding a battery engaged in stemming the advance of the results of the shot, he was convinced the Teutonic forces on the lower Piave.
